

This site is based on consultation with a group of academics comprising experts and doctoral students in semiology/semiotics.

We started from the fairly simple acknowledgement that semiology/semiotics is a science that is unfortunately little known by the general public. The site therefore aims to offer an introduction to this vast and fascinating area of study.

Please feel free to contribute to this site by sending us your comments and assessments by email; we will modify it as we receive your responses.

Some of this site's content is taken from the online encyclopedia Wikipedia. The content of Wikipedia articles is reusable according to the licence imposed by Wikipedia. Please don't hesitate to contribute to this fabulous online project.

Happy reading!